

I think the fact that this proposed FCC rule change has not been given coverage in any of the media to which I have access clearly proves how dangerous it is to give more power to media owners. They do not discuss important issues if they are not advantageous to them. The point of media regulation is to prevent this sort of abuse and to enable the American people to have access to truthful, important information. Once a few people own most of the media, what is to prevent them from abusing it? The FCC's purpose is to protect the American people's ownership of the airwaves. Do not change the rules and make it easier for the few to rule the many. Remember, the US motto is E Pluribus Unum - One from Many, not the other way around. American diversity is one of our greatest strengths. Please respect and protect it by ensuring a diverse ownership of our airwaves.
